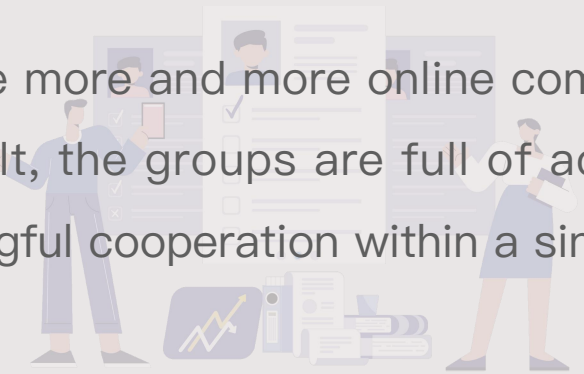
Why?

★ For international students in the U.S. looking for a job, the only reliable way is to develop a personal network and get referrals from employees who have already secured positions at top companies.

On LinkedIn, job seekers spend $60 a month on VIP memberships to message employees at top companies, but either their messages go unread, or they can't schedule a time to meet.

Offline networking events, like social mixers and closed-door activities, bring dozens of people together in one room for three hours, but it’s challenging to meet someone who can actually collaborate or provide a referral—it's highly inefficient.

Communities: Nowadays, there are more and more online communities, but the members often don't know each other. As a result, the groups are full of advertisements, and members are rarely able to establish any meaningful cooperation within a single WeChat group.



Excisting

Indeed is the most widely used platform by job seekers, offering a vast number of job listings suitable for candidates in all industries. However, due to the large number of users, the competition is relatively intense.

The membership prices are quite high: Premium Sales costs $79.99 per month, and Premium Hiring costs $119.95 per month. International students find it difficult to directly secure jobs on LinkedIn. Most use LinkedIn for networking, but the results are often unsatisfactory.

Target Market

Job seekers:

Develop a personal network and get referrals from employees who have already secured positions at top companies.

Employees at top companies:

(Can) charge for answering questions, provide referrals, and gain emotional satisfaction.
